Hammersmith Mandarin Congregation Sharing

As September arrives and lifts the curtain of autumn, London's universities welcome new students embarking on new chapters of their academic journeys. The Mandarin Congregations (Hammersmith and Kingston) are located near three major universities with close geographical proximity: Imperial College London, Roehampton University, and Kingston University, all of which have seen a significant influx of new Chinese students.

This large number signifies the heavy responsibility our Congregation bears in its student evangelistic ministry. While all three universities are higher education institutions, they each possess unique characteristics, strengths, and students with distinct inclinations: students at Imperial College are mostly academic high-achievers with superior intellect; many Chinese students at Roehampton and Kingston Universities choose art-related subjects, excelling at both sensitivity and creativity.

Facing each vibrant young, unbeliever Chinese student, how can we acknowledge their created gifts, enabling them to truly experience and recognise God's wisdom, compassion, light, and love? Besides responding to God's call, seeking His wisdom, and obeying His guidance, our teams also need to constantly refresh our perspectives and launch flexible strategies and approaches.

The Signpost Fellowship, deeply rooted at Imperial College London, decided through unified prayer and meetings before the summer break to introduce the Alpha AFS series as the main content in the fall, following the campus orientation at the end of September. The members prepare together every Tuesday evening and practice on Friday evenings, exploring while proceeding. However, seeing new friends gather together, watch videos to learn about Jesus, and get to know each other through discussion alleviate our hesitation: we hope that the young students will gradually open their hearts and allow the seeds of the Gospel to sprout.

The Kingston church's campus outreach ministry, now in its second year, welcomed new students with the Mid-Autumn Festival feast and invited them to participate in the Chinese Alpha program. Although the number is small, we believe that God has given us an appropriate number according to our capacity. Looking to the future, we hope that together we can build a closely connected Chinese faith community, walking hand in hand on the heavenly path.
